MANY BRIDES IN ONE DAY

Charming Wedding of Mr. H. A. Colman and Miss Edna M. Hercher.

Miss Marian Lee Morgan and Mr. Wilfred Seymour McLeod married at St. Patrick's.

Although yesterday was not an ideal day for weddings, a number of pretty nuptial events took place. The first to be solemnized was that of Miss Edna Mary Hercher, the only daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Hercher, and Mr. Harry Atwood Colman, a member of the local staff of the Associated Press. The ceremony occurred at 9:30 o'clock, at the family residence, No. 1229 Tenth street, which was abloom with pink and white cosmos against a background of palms. Announced by the wedding march from Lohengrin, played by Miss Grace McLeod, the bride and groom descended the stairway and took their post in the parlor. The bride wore a gown of white tulle, the high bodice garlanded with white buds and finished with soft touches of chiffon. She carried a large bouquet of white roses, and wore a single veil. Later in the morning Mr. and Mrs. Colman left for their wedding trip, to be absent several weeks, the bride wearing a tailor-made suit of London fabric. Upon their return they will reside at No. 405 C street northwest.

Despite the inclement weather Trinity P. E. Church was filled at noon yesterday with the relatives and friends of Miss Sarah Elizabeth Davidson and Mr. Theodore Oliver Elough to witness their marriage, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. Williams, pastor of the church. As the organist changed his theme from Schubert's "Serenade," which he had been playing together with other beautiful selections during the seating of the guests, the wedding march from "Lohengrin" the bride and groom entered the church. The bridesmaids were Mr. James E. Bell, Mr. F. A. Kohn, Mr. H. S. Merrill and Mr. A. E. Kohn. The best man was Dr. George N. French. The bride, wearing a white tulle gown, carried a large bouquet of white roses, and wore a single veil. The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast to relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. Elough left during the afternoon for a honeymoon trip which will conclude at New York, where they will live and where they will be at home to their friends at No. 420 East Twenty-ninth street after December 1.

Another noon wedding was that of Miss Jessie Van Rensselaer Kern and Mr. William J. O'Brien, Jr., of Baltimore, which was solemnized at the residence of Mrs. Kern, the bride's mother, No. 1718 Connecticut street, Rev. Dr. Stafford, of St. Patrick's, officiating. The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast to relatives and friends. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien left during the afternoon for a honeymoon trip which will conclude at New York, where they will live and where they will be at home to their friends at No. 420 East Twenty-ninth street after December 1.

The bride was Miss Marian Lee Morgan and the groom Mr. Wilfred Seymour McLeod, the former being the granddaughter of the late Mayor Thomas P. Morgan, of this city, and the latter a representative of one of the oldest and most prominent residential families of Georgetown. MUSIC AND DRAMA.

The tragedy of the son of Montague and the daughter of Capulet was unfolded again by Miss Mather and her company at the Columbia last night. The character of Juliet was the sterling stone to the actors' career and the compass of Juliet's untimely winsomeness and martyrly tragedy was supposed to be the best effort of her then immature talents. Since then she has elapsed years of other labors, a period of refinement and matured beauty. Francis, who does not affect a youthful Juliet, which makes more the contrast between her and Mr. Coleman's Romeo, for he seems a too young boy with his lipping, piping treble and too affected enunciation. Once he forgot himself in the speech addressed to Tybalt before the encounter. It was a natural moment of power, denoting how much finer an actor Mr. Coleman might be if only he gave natural methods a showing.

Some of the minor characters were admirably acted. Sordani is a Capulet acted or read better than did Mr. Kane Hines. Mr. Sordani was a benighted and a fine. Paris was made less the beau and more the rational author by Mr. Fred. Harley, and Lynn Pratt remembered to be natural occasionally, with free rein to his good voice and intelligent conception as Tybalt. Though good in taste, the gown was a little too heavy for the weather. Price did not find the note of humor in Mercutio's early scenes, which denotes him a merry fellow, and Miss Breyer missed entirely the playful rally with which the nurse keeps her language of Romeo from her lover. Placing over the scene, the fact that the apothecary's shop was found on Capulet's lawn, the staging reflected credit on the directors. The garden and tomb scenes were especially complete, and the dressing was all right. The night "The Banquet" history of the week, "Cymbeline," except Saturday matinee, when "Romeo and Juliet" will be repeated.

Tomorrow afternoon at the National Bonte Ross gives its only concert in Washington. This is one of the rare musical events of the season. The band made a genuine success in New York, and this time it is giving concerts in Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Baltimore. The Bonte Ross differs materially in its composition from the bands we are accustomed to in this country, and the ensemble playing is said to be the most remarkable because the musicians are obeying a common rule, and when entered into a common impulse when they use their clarinets, oboes and horns, and even the instruments of song. Their concert here will be awaited with unusual interest.

Robert Keely and Miss Effie Shannon are now in their initial season at the stars. Their company is acknowledged to be one of the best that is traveling, including, as it does, such capable and well-known people as William J. Le Moyne, Edmund D. Lyons, Bruce McKee, David Torrence, Rich. E. Branton, Edward Lee, Edward Jones, Miss Edie Walton and Miss George Bushy. More than this, they say they have made a very happy selection of a play, "A Cost of Many Colors," which is credited with being in Madeline Lucette Krey's best manner, and finally they have put the comedy on the stage with a degree of judgment and taste and attention to detail that leaves really nothing to be desired.

"A Cost of Many Colors" was written, especially for Mr. Keely and Miss Shannon, but the other members of the company would seem to be equally happily fitted in their several parts. The comedy abounds in eminently amusing situations, some of which are in the least degree improbable, and the story it tells is a well knit and interesting one, bright in dialogue, thoroughly humorous, and yet with a strong touch of pathos here and there.

Next week at the National the Bostonians will present their new opera, "The Serenade," by Harry Smith and Victor Roberts. All the favorites are said to have good parts. The action of the opera is laid in Spain at the beginning of the sixteenth century, and deals with the amatory adventures of a baritone of the royal opera, who has carried on a flirtation with the ward and fiancée of a jealous old duke. The duke, however, has placed his ward and betrothed beyond the reach of the singer and the serenade, and the recurrence of this duty in the opera's plot is the main motive of the opera. In a pictorial sense, the Serenade has been most carefully produced, and the day clothes costumes, beautiful scenery and well-balanced groupings are a delight to the eye. The seats for the engagement will be placed on sale this morning.

The famous actor-musician, Auguste Van Biene, of whom Clement Scott, England's greatest critic, said, "there are two things worth living for, to hear Adeline Van Biene sing, and to hear Auguste Van Biene play the cello," will give his first concert in Washington at the Columbia Theatre, on Monday next, for one week. "A Madman's Romance" on the program in the afternoon. Mr. Van Biene is said to have made an instantaneous and pronounced success. Entirely new scenery, original music and superb costumes have been prepared for these occasions. Mr. Van Biene's company has been carefully selected by Messrs. Kline & Erlanger, the famous New York managers, who produced "Jack and the Beanstalk," "In Gay New York," and "One Round of Pleasure," so that we are assured of something really good. Van Biene will have ample opportunity in the play for the display of his wonderful execution as a "cellist."

The patrons of the Academy of Music are promised a treat next week by the presentation of that popular play, "Human Beasts," one of the most successful melodramas seen for a number of years, and which has captured two years of splendid patronage from the public and hearty praise from the press in all the large cities. With the exception of a few changes in minor parts, the company presenting the play now is identical with the first night's performance in New York, 1895. It is not remarkable that the cast and scenery remains the same, and that not a line of the piece has been changed.

The management seem to rest secure in the idea that when there are no criticisms in the newspapers, the public must be satisfied. Included in the cast is the author of the play, Mr. Hal Reid, one of the most popular actors of the day and particularly well cast for the leading role, having the action and attractiveness of physique to make an excellent exponent of romantic odes and a model hero.

The Bijou ball for next week will include the well-known star, Charles T. Ellis, assisted by his own company, Mrs. Hogg's, who is a very popular singer. The program also includes the production of ancient statuary, Harry B. Smith, assisted by Miss Nellie Brim, in their protean sketch, "Sketches," Clark and Angeline, the well-known Denny Mann; Miss Ade Broun, vocalist and instrumentalist; the Bijou Stock Company; a new farce comedy.

One of the most popular emotional actresses on the American stage is the beautiful and accomplished Marie Wainwright. Miss
